

Abstract

To prevent damages to a film liquid crystal device. Side edges of a film liquid crystal device are fit in upper grooves of supporting members, and these supporting members are fixed to an attaching portion. In addition, an opening is formed between a cover glass and the film liquid crystal device. Thus, since a central part of the film liquid crystal device is supported non-contactingly, damages to the film liquid crystal device can be prevented.